

JUVENILE OFFENSE REFERRALS

An offense referral is a record that a juvenile was arrested or cited and then referred to the prosecutor.

Juvenile court offense referrals are a way to track trends in juvenile crime. Juvenile court referrals are standardized throughout the state and can be retrieved from the JUVIS system, which is maintained by the Office of the Administrator for the Courts, and from the King County record system. The two systems are not compatible.

A court referral is a listing of a juvenile's name and offense in the juvenile court's legal record keeping system. It is a record that the juvenile was arrested or cited for an offense by a law enforcement agency, and then referred to the prosecutor. A referral is not a conviction.

The number of juvenile court offense referrals is always greater than the number of arrests, because a referral may include other court procedures.

The total number of juvenile court offense referrals for 2002 was 57,352. This figure represents a decrease of four percent over the 2001 figure of 59,901. From 1992 to 2002 the rate of juvenile court offense referrals decreased steadily from 84,432 to 57,352 (a 32 percent decrease). From 1987 to 1992, the rate of juvenile court offense referrals increased steadily approximately three percent per year.

Of the 57,352 court offense referrals, 7,606 were from King County. This represents a decrease of 18.5 percent over the 2001 figure of 9,338. Juvenile court offense referrals from King County decreased by 53 percent from 1992 to 2002.

Offense referrals are grouped according to severity. Type A+ and A are the most serious and include murder and rape; Type E is the least serious and includes reckless driving. Over three-quarters (75 percent) of offense referrals for 2002 were for Type D and E. Less than two percent of all referrals were for Type A+, A, or A -.

COURT OFFENSE REFERRALS BY RACE AND ETHNICITY

The racial/ethnic distribution of juvenile court offense referrals for 2002 showed that 67 percent were White, ten percent were Black, five percent were Asian, eleven percent were Hispanic, and two percent were Native American. The ethnicity of five percent of juvenile court offense referrals were not reported. These figures have remained relatively unchanged since 1987.

JUVENILES REFERRED TO PROSECUTOR*

In 2002, 45,573 cases were referred to the prosecutor for criminal offenses.

The county prosecutor is responsible for prosecuting juvenile cases. The prosecutor decides whether to divert a case, whether charges should be filed and which offenses should be charged. A juvenile may be involved in more than one case within a year depending on the number of times the juvenile offends. A case may involve more than one charge/offense depending on the circumstances of the event and the decision of the prosecutor.

Juveniles who commit minor/first offenses may be offered diversion instead of being taken to court. Juveniles who do not complete a diversion agreement, refuse diversion or are refused diversion are charged in juvenile court.

Changes in the method of tabulation of data for 1992 forward may account for differences in court case processing from previous years. The Office of the Administrator for the Courts has reissued the data for 1994 due to a program coding error in reports that reflect the gender and racial breakdowns for juveniles. Data for 1994 has been updated to more accurately depict current information.

In 2002, 45,573 cases were referred to the prosecutor for criminal offenses. Cases referred to diversion comprised 38 percent of the cases; charges were filed on 38 percent of the cases; and on 22 percent of the cases there was no action taken.

The rate of referrals to diversion was fairly constant from 1988 to 1992 in the range of 45 to 49 percent of those cases referred to the prosecutor. The rate decreased from 1993 to 1996 (from 42% to 37%), and remained relatively unchanged from 1997-2002 (38%).

The proportion of cases where charges were filed has increased from 29 percent in 1988 to 38 percent in 2002, an increase of 31 percent.

The proportion of cases for which no action was taken in 2002 was 22 percent. This figure has remained fairly constant from 1989 to 2002, ranging from 21 percent to 26 percent.

The courts remanded juveniles to adult court in less than one percent of the cases charged in 2002, relatively no change throughout a six-year period.

In 2002, just eight percent of the juvenile cases were sentenced to the Juvenile Rehabilitation Administration (JRA). This figure continues a steady decrease from the 1994 figure of 13 percent. Ninety-one percent of the cases were sentenced to detention, probation, community service, community supervision, counseling, fines, restitution, or the SSODA program.

* Data on juveniles referred to prosecutor do not include King County.

JUVENILES REFERRED TO

During 2002, 98 juvenile cases (less than one half of one percent of those juvenile cases referred to the prosecutor) were remanded to adult court. Counties where ten or more juvenile cases were remanded to adult court were Clark (22), and Spokane (17).

Of the juvenile cases referred to diversion, 76 percent completed diversion, two percent are in process, and 22 percent did not complete, refused or were refused diversion. Of those diversion cases where juveniles did not complete the diversion agreement, refused or were refused diversion, 47 percent resulted in charges being filed and cases referred to court

Most cases that are adjudicated result in a conviction. Approximately 73 percent of the adjudicated cases resulted in a guilty finding.

Less than one percent of the cases were found not guilty; and 25 percent of the cases were dismissed; relatively no change from 2001 and 2000.

Sentencing within the standard range was the most common disposition. Ninety-six percent of the juvenile cases adjudicated guilty were sentenced within the standard range. Three percent were sentenced outside the standard range (judge declared a manifest injustice [M.I.]). Of the cases sentenced outside the standard range, Eighty-seven percent of the cases were MI up and thirteen percent of the cases were MI down. A change from the 2001 rates of 81 percent MI up and 19 percent MI down.

Gender

Males are referred to the prosecutor at a higher rate than females. Seventy-one percent of the juvenile cases referred to the prosecutor involved males. Ninety-seven percent of the juvenile cases remanded to adult court involved males.

Cases involving females are referred to diversion at a higher rate than males. Forty-eight percent of cases involving females were referred to diversion as compared to 33 percent of cases that involved males.

Cases referred to the prosecutor that involved females were much less likely to be charged (28 percent for females, compared to 42 percent for males in 2002). Relatively unchanged from 2001. From 1995 to 1998 there was a steady increase in the percent of cases involving females that resulted in charges being filed (from 22 percent to 28 percent.) There was no action on 23 percent of the cases for males and 22 percent for females.

DISTRIBUTION

Reporting of race and ethnicity has increased since 1990. Consequently, the rate of increase in cases referred to the prosecutor, diversion, etc., by race or ethnicity may be overstated.

Of the cases where race or ethnicity was recorded in 2002, 73 percent of the cases referred to the prosecutor were White, seven percent were Black, four percent were Native American, thirteen percent were Hispanic, and two percent were Asian American.

Of the juvenile cases referred to diversion where race or ethnicity was recorded, 77 percent of the juveniles were White, six percent were Black, three percent were Native American, eleven percent were Hispanic, and three percent were Asian American.

Of the juvenile cases remanded to adult court where race was recorded 54 percent of the juveniles were White, 12 percent were Black, eight percent were Native American, 22 percent were Hispanic, and three percent were Asian American.

In 2002, 12,503 juvenile cases were sentenced within the local standard range. Of those cases where race or ethnicity was recorded, 70 percent were White, eight percent were Black, five percent were Native American, 15 percent were Hispanic, and two percent were Asian American.

In 2002, 364 juvenile cases were sentenced outside the standard range (judge declared a manifest injustice or M.I.), an increase of 12 percent from 2001. Of those cases in 2002, 309 were sentenced outside the standard range to the Juvenile Rehabilitation Administration (JRA). Of the 309 juvenile cases sentenced, 68 percent were White, nine percent were Black, seven percent were Native American, 13 percent were Hispanic, and four percent were Asian American.

These data do not include Other Category and Unknown Category.

King County data are not included.

Changes in the method of tabulation may account for differences in juvenile court case processing data from previous years.

* Some Automatic Remands to Adult Court Jurisdiction are included in the "No Action" totals for 1998-2002.

These data were obtained from the Office of the Administrator for the Courts.

Data Analysis

1. Descriptive Statistics: Summarize the data using measures of central tendency (mean, median, mode) and measures of dispersion (variance, standard deviation).

2. Inferential Statistics: Use statistical tests to draw conclusions about the population based on the sample data.

3. Regression Analysis: Examine the relationship between variables and predict the outcome of one variable based on the values of other variables.

4. Correlation Analysis: Measure the strength and direction of the relationship between two variables.

5. Hypothesis Testing: Test a specific hypothesis about the population parameters using statistical tests.

6. ANOVA (Analysis of Variance): Compare the means of three or more groups to determine if there are significant differences between them.

7. Chi-Square Test: Test the independence of two categorical variables.

8. Factorial ANOVA: Test the effects of two or more independent variables on a dependent variable.

9. Logistic Regression: Predict the probability of a binary outcome based on the values of other variables.

10. Bayesian Statistics: Use probability theory to update the probability of a hypothesis as more evidence is gathered.

11. Time Series Analysis: Analyze data points collected over time to identify trends and patterns.

12. Survival Analysis: Analyze time-to-event data to estimate the probability of survival over time.

13. Structural Equation Modeling (SEM): Test a complex model of relationships between multiple variables.

14. Machine Learning: Use statistical models to learn from data and make predictions or classifications.

15. Bayesian Networks: Represent probabilistic relationships between variables using directed acyclic graphs.

16. Support Vector Machines (SVM): A type of machine learning algorithm used for classification and regression analysis.

17. Decision Trees: A type of machine learning algorithm used for classification and regression analysis.

18. Random Forests: A type of machine learning algorithm that combines the results of multiple decision trees.

19. Neural Networks: A type of machine learning algorithm inspired by the human brain, used for classification and regression analysis.

20. Deep Learning: A type of machine learning algorithm that uses multiple layers of neural networks to learn from data.

KING COUNTY JUVENILE COURT CASE RESULTS

Between 1995 and 2001
cases referred to the prosecutor decreased by 42 percent.

Data on juveniles referred to King County Juvenile Court were provided by the King County Office of the Prosecuting Attorney. Data on gender and race/ethnicity are not available.

In 2002, 8,715 juveniles were referred to the prosecutor in King County. Of this number 2,970, (34 percent) were referred to diversion; charges were filed on 4,463 (51 percent); and there was no action on 1,253 (14 percent). During this time, 29 juveniles were remanded to adult court.

Between 1995 and 2002 cases referred to the prosecutor decreased by 45 percent, cases referred to diversion decreased by 48 percent, and cases remanded to adult court increased by 26 percent.

Of the juveniles referred to diversion in 2002, 70 percent completed diversion, and 40 percent did not complete, refused or were refused diversion (includes some carryover cases from the previous year). Ninety-two percent of those diversion cases where the juvenile did not complete the diversion agreement, refused, or was refused diversion resulted in charges being filed.

Of the juveniles adjudicated in 2002, 30 percent resulted in a guilty finding (found guilty or plead guilty), two percent were found not guilty; and 68 percent of the charges were dismissed.
